MESSAGE ON THE SECRET SERVICE

President Replies to Congressional Resolution.

SAYS HE DID NOT HIT AT HOUSE

Language In Annual Communication Called Objectionable by Representatives Will Stand Analysis, Declares Executive - He Renews His Argument For Repeal of Law Limiting Activities of Treasury Agents-Cites Cases In Which They Have Aided In Punishment of Violators of Federal Laws.

Washington, Jan. 4.—In a special message to the house of representatives today President Roosevelt says: To the House of Representatives:

house of representatives of Dec. 17, 1908, running as follows:

Whereas, There was contained in the branch of the government. sundry civil appropriation bill which passed congress at its last session and became a law a provision in reference to the employment of the secret service in the treasury department; and, Whereas In the last annual message of the president of the United States to the two houses of congress it was stated in reference to that provision, "It is not too much to say that this amendment has been of benefit only and could be of benefit only to the criminal classes," and it was further stated, "The chief argument in favor of the provision was that the congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated by secret service men,' and it was further stated. "But if this is not considered desirable a special exception could be made in the law prohibiting the use of the secret service force in investigating members of congress," would be far better to do this than to do prevent or at least to hamper effective ction against criminals by the executive branch of the government; and, Whereas, The plain meaning of the above words is that the majority of the congressmen were in fear of being investigated by secret service men and that congress as a whole was actuated by that motive in enacting the provision in question: and.

Whereas, Your committee appointed to consider these statements of the president and to report to the house cannot find in the hearings before committees nor in the records of the house or senate any justification of this impeachment of the honor and integrity of the congress: and. Whereas, Your committee would prefer in order to make an intelligent and comprehensive report, just to the president s well as to the congress, to have all have to communicate; now, therefore,

Be it resolved, That the president be requested to transmit to the house any of the provision was that the congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated by secret service men" and also to transmit to the house any evidence connecting any member of the house of representatives of the Sixtieth congress with corrupt action in his official capacity and to inform the house the punishment of any such individual by the courts or has reported any such alleged delinquencies to the house of rep-

"I Cannot Understand Resolution." I am wholly at a loss to understand the concluding portion of the resolution. I have made no charges of corruption against congress nor against any member of the present house. If ing any member of the house in any matter as to which the federal government has jurisdiction, action would at once be brought, as was done in the cases of Senators Mitchell and Burton and Representatives Williamson, Herrmann and Driggs at different times since I have been president. But I do or the duties of the president to report to the house "alleged delinquencies" of members or the supposed "corrupt action" of a member "in his official capacity." The membership of the house is by the constitution placed within the power of the house alone. In the prosecution of criminals and the enforcement of the laws the president | the facts. must resort to the courts of the United States.

Portion of Message Quoted.

In the third and fourth clauses of the preamble it is stated that the meaning of my words is that "the majority of the congressmen are in fear of being investigated by secret service men," and that "congress as a whole was actuated by that motive in enacting the provision in question," and that this is an impeachment of the honor and integrity of the congress. These statements are not, I think, in accordance with the facts. The portion of my message referred to runs as follows:

Last year an amendment was incorporated in the measure providing for the secret service which provided that there should be no detail from the secret service and no transfer therefrom. It is not too much to say that this amendment has been of benefit only and could be of benefit only to the criminal classes. If deliberately introduced for the purpose of diminishing the effectiveness of war against crime it could not have been better devised to this end. It forbade the practices that had been followed to a greater or less extent by the executive heads of various departments for twenty years. To these practices we owe the securing of the evidence which enabled us to drive great lotteries out of business and secure a quarter of a million of dollars in fines from their promoters. These practices have enabled us to discover some of the most outrageous frauds in connection with the theft of government land and government timber by great corporations and by individuals. These practices have enabled us to get some of the evidence indispensable in order to secure the conviction of the wealthiest and most formidable criminals with whom the government has to deal, both those operating in viola-amendment in question was of benefit to no one excepting to these criminals, and it seriously hampers the government in the detection of crime and the securing of justice. Moreover, it not only affects departments outside of the treasury, but it tends to hamper the secretary of the treasury himself in the effort to utilize the employees of his department so as to best meet the requirements of the public service. It forbids him from preventing frauds upon the customs service, from investigating irregularities in branch mints and assay offices and has seriously crippled him. It prevents the promotion of employees in the secret service, and this present form the restriction operates only to the advantage of the criminal, of the

The chief argument in favor of the provision was that the congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated by secret service men. Very little of such the indictment and conviction of a senator and a congressman for land frauds inals in any branch of the public service, and, exactly as we have again and again during the past seven years prosecuted and convicted such criminals who were ment, so in my belief we should be given ample means to prosecute them if found in the legislative branch. But if this is not considered desirable a special exceping the use of the secret service force in To the House of Representatives:

I have received the resolution of the livestigating members of the congress. It would be far better to do this than to do what actually was done and strive to action against criminals by the executive

Asks Careful Reading of Message. A careful reading of this message will show that I said nothing to warrant the statement that "the majority of the congressmen were in fear of being investigated by the secret service men" or "that congress as a whole was actuated by that motive." I did not make any such statement in this message. Moreover, I have never made any such statement about congress as a whole nor, with a few inevitable exceptions, about the members of congress in any message or article or speech. On the contrary, I have always not only deprecated, but vigorously resented, the practice of indiswhat actually was done and strive to criminate attack upon congress and indiscriminate condemnation of all congressmen, wise and unwise, fit and unfit, good and bad alike. No one realizes more than I the importance of co-operation between the executive and congress, and no one holds the authority and dignity of the congress of the United States in higher respect than I do. I have not the slightest sympathy with the practice of judging men for good or for ill not on their several merits, but in a mass, as members of one particular body or one caste. To put together all men holding or who have held a particular office, whether it be the office of president or judge or senator or member of the the information which the president may house of representatives, and to class them all, without regard to their individual differences, as good or bad evidence upon which he based his state- seems to me utterly indefensible, and ity for the statement that this approments that the "chief argument in favor it is equally indefensible whether the priation law to which reference was good are confounded with the bad in made imposes no restrictions whatever a heated and unwarranted champion- upon the use of the secret service men. ship of all or in a heated and unwarranted assault upon all. [Appendix C President Roosevelt to Speaker Cannon protesting against the cutting down in the sundry civil bill of the appropriation for secret service work. "The only people benefited would be vent or correct," were the words of the president.] These methods proved unavailing to prevent the wrong. Messrs. Tawney and Smith and their fellow members on the appropriations committee paid no heed to the protests, and as the obnoxious provision was incorporated in the sundry civil bill it discuss it on its merits, as I should have done had it been in a separate bill. Therefore I have now taken the only method available, that of discussing it in my message to congress, and as all efforts to secure what I regard proper treatment of the subject failed I have spoken plainly and di-explicit terms. [Here the president gives instances in which the secret service men have been instrumental in securing convictions of offenses against federal laws, citing especially the land fraud cases.]

In connection with the Nebraska prosecution the government has by decree secured the return to the government of over a million acres of grazing land, in Colorado of more than are now pending involving 150,000 acres more.

Department's Agents Dishonest.

All these investigations in the land cases were undertaken in consequence of Mr. Hitchcock, the then secretary of the interior, becoming convinced that there were extensive frauds committed in his department, and the ramifications of the frauds were so his own officials to deal in thoroughgoing fashion with them. One of the secret service men accordingly resigned and was appointed in the interior department to carry on this work. The first thing he discovered was that the special agents' division or corps of detectives of the land office of the interior department was largely under the control of the land thieves, and in consequence the investigations above re- the most efficient instrument possible ferred to had to be made by secret

The facts above given show beyond possibility of doubt that what the secretary of the treasury and I had both written prior to the enactment of the obnoxious provision and what I have since written in my message to the congress state the facts exactly as 2,000 acres of mineral land, and suits they are. The obnoxious provision is of benefit only to the criminal class and can be of benefit only to the criminal class. If it had been embodied in the law at the time when I became president, all the prosecutions above mentioned and many others of the same general type would either not have been undertaken or would have been undertaken with the government at a great disadvantage, and many farreaching that he was afraid to trust | and probably most of the chief offenders would have gone scot free instead of being punished for their crimes. Such a body as the secret service, such a body of trained investigating agents, occupying a permanent position in the government service and separate from local investigating forces in different departments, is an absolute necessity if the best work is to be done against criminals. It is by far to use against crime. Of course the more efficient an instrument is the more dangerous it is if misused. To the argument that a force like this can be misused it is only necessary to answer that the condition of its useshall be so efficient as to be dangerous if handled improperly. Any instance investigating force in the departments should be unsparingly punished, and congress should hold itself ready at any and all times to investigate the executive departments whenever thereis reason to believe that any such instance of abuse has occurred. I wish only the right of congress, but emphatically its duty. To use the secret service in the investigation of purely a gross abuse. But there has been no single instance of such abuse during my term as president.

BASEBALL MAGNATES MEET AT CINCINNATI

Many Questions Come Before National Commission Today.

Cincinnati, Jan. 4.—The men who are filled from hat to shoe with the history, customs and rules of baseball who know more about the national game as it is played today than the late Henry Chadwick, its "father," got together here today in the meeting of the national commission. Before the meeting is over several pages will be added to the history of baseball, if present indications do not lie.

Chief among the questions that are before the commission is the demand of the American association and the Eastern League for changes regarding the drafting rules. Briefly stated, these two organizations want the privilege now possessed only by the two big leagues of drafting men from minor leagues instead of acquiring them only by purchase. The demand was presented at the recent meeting of the commission in New York, but was laid over until today.

A majority of the requests made by the American association and the Eastern league are being seriously considered by the national commission and it is said many concessions will be made, as some people say, to open up a more serious demand, why, I will go as far as anyone to resist them."

Rome, Jan. 4.—Having done all possible to do in the districts laid waste by the earthquake, the king and queen of Italy returned today to Rome. They have spent the last four days among the ruins of Sicily and Calabria, the king directing the work of rescue and relief and the queen ministering to the injured. There is a feeling of relief in Italy that their majesties have returned.

Ambassador Griscom has succeeded in finding an American Lloyd steamer of 8,000 tons capable of carrying 1,200 passengers. He has chartered the steamer for two weeks, and it is being loaded with medical supplies and proexpected that the steamer will sail Republican joint caucus nomination of from Civita Vecchia, about fifty miles from Rome, on Thursday. It will be placed under the orders of the Italian government.

In addition to supplies, the American relief vessel will embark six doctors and twenty male and female nurses, three of the latter being American girls from New York who volunteered their services.

American energy has been strongly manifested in the work looking to the reltef of the earthquake sufferers. Ambassador Griscom and the members of the committee have assumed personal responsibility for the expenses of the expedition, relying upon the American public for funds.

It is now clear that the enormous number of casualties in Messina were due to the suddenness with which the first shock came, giving but little time to the people to escape from their homes. The tidal wave was not so high as was at first reported, and would have done little damage had it not been preceded by the earthquake. The damage done by fire also was comparatively insignificant.

The first earth shock literally threw down the city and almost every street was completely buried under the walls that had fallen, furniture and other debris practically cutting off every av. To the Relief Fund in This Country, enue of escape.

Then came the tidal wave to inundate the city and the living and dying were caught like rats and drowned, or had their brains dashed out by being thrown by the rushing waters against piles of masonry and rubbish. In many quarters of the city the stench from the decomposing bodies hinders greatly the rescuers in their work.
